

VARSITY SQUAD FINISHES HARD WORK FOR PENN

Scrubs and Regulars Alternate in Scrimmage With Freshmen—Dorais Will be Pitted Against All-American.

For 30 minutes yesterday afternoon the varsity squad, regulars and scrubs, was driven through a fierce scrimmage with the Notre Dame freshmen in the last stiff workout ordered for the gold and blue before the big game with Penn State on Friday. Harper first sent the scrubs against the first year men and after 15 minutes of play shot his regulars in for the rest of the night. The varsity rang up four touchdowns and might have scored more but for the fact that Harper often halted a man after he had broken into a clear field.

Jones, Feeney and Berger cleared for report for practice yesterday. Al Feeney, who lives in Indianapolis, went home yesterday to vote in the city elections. The husky center also has a lame shoulder but he will be in trim for Friday's contest. Gushurst was out in uniform yesterday but because of a bad leg was kept out of scrimmage. Harper expects, however, to have every player that entered the West Point contest in shape for the Penn State tilt.

Scrubs Play Freshmen.

Scrimmage opened yesterday with the scrubs lined up against the freshmen. In 15 minutes the varsity second string had battered its way to two touchdowns. The first touchdown was the result of steady line plunging, varied occasionally by a clever forward pass.

Immediately following the scrubs' second score the regulars were given a crack at the freshmen. Again the peerless Dorais was the shining light of the Notre Dame attack. The little general threw pass after pass for long gains and Harper will undoubtedly rely upon him to bewilder Penn State as he did the Army. The fight Friday between the rival quarterbacks for first honors should be a merry one. Miller of Penn State was picked by many for all-American quarterback last year and during the present season he is going better than he was last. He is the only man in the east that can compare with Dorais and it is up to the little Notre Dame man Friday to outshine his speedy opponent.

Elchenlaub Laid Out.

Elchenlaub hit the line in good style yesterday. Toward the close of the scrimmage he broke through the freshman defense but was tackled so hard by Thorpe that he was forced to retire.

Rockne was all over the field when it came to receiving forward passes. Edward played a clever game at end and helped out on the varsity attack by completing several good heaves from Dorais. In the line Cook, Lathrop and Keefe were working well and they often smeared the freshmen players.

Cofaul was easily the star of the first year men. Not only did he get away for some good gains, one of which went for 15 yards, but his splendid defensive play often checked the varsity's speedy rushes. Bachmann, Thorpe and King put up a good fight for the freshmen.

REMARKABLE RISE OF HEINIE WAGNER—FROM HELL'S KITCHEN TEAM TO CAPTAINCY OF WORLD'S CHAMPIONS, BOSTON RED SOX

Just how high an ambitious boy, blessed with ability, can climb in baseball, was never demonstrated more gorgeously than by Heinie Wagner, the hustling little field leader of the Boston Red Sox.

About 15 years ago Billy Rodenbach, former amateur middleweight boxing champion, managed and played with a nine on New York's upper west side. The team was to play a formidable club in New Jersey and the day before the game the third baseman went to bed, mighty sick, causing dismay in the organization, for it wasn't easy to dig up a good infielder on short notice.

Rodenbach had given up hope of making any sort of a showing in the game when a friend met him and said, "Billy, there's a kid down in Hell's kitchen that looks like the goods. Go take a look at him."

Rodenbach went to the historic ground and at 39th st. and Eleventh av. found a game for the "championship of the kitchen." In progress. Rodenbach glued his eyes on the third baseman of one team and was impressed with the way the kid scooped all sorts of drives and sailed them across to the first baseman.

Between innings Rodenbach approached the kid and asked him to go over to Jersey the next day to play with his club.

"Aw, gwan, I can't play wit you big guys," replied the little fellow.

"I suppose you have done pretty well this season."

"Yes," answered the player, "with my salary as player, extras for acting as captain and my share of the world's series, I'll clean up about $10,000."

"Good for you," said Rodenbach, "and you're earning it. It's different his seat and shook hands with one of the Red Sox. After some general talk Billy said:

"I suppose you have done pretty well this season."

"Yes," answered the player, "with my salary as player, extras for acting as captain and my share of the world's series, I'll clean up about $10,000."

"Good for you," said Rodenbach, "and you're earning it. It's different from the day I slipped you half a dollar to play third, isn't it?"

"Sure," said the player laughing. "But do you know, Billy, that 50 cents looked as big to me that day as a thousand does today?"

And Capt. Heinie Wagner of the world's champions walked from the Polo grounds, dreaming of the days when he scooped sizzling grounders off the cobbles of Hell's kitchen.

STATE FOOTBALL NEWS

BUTLER. INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5.—Butler college and DePauw will hold their annual football battle on Irwin field Saturday, regardless of present street car difficulties in Indianapolis, according to E. N. Johnson, chairman of the Butler faculty athletic committee.

Unless there is a renewal of traffic by Wednesday, Mr. Johnson says that Butler officials will attempt to secure special train service over the Pennsylvania road.

WABASH.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 5.—Coach Thurber sent the scarlet warriors through a hard scrimmage to initiate his campaign against Earl-land Tuesday afternoon and drilled them on the weak spots uncovered in the game with the Baptists. He also taught them some new plays which he will spring on the Quakers at Richmond next Saturday. All the men were out for practice with the exception of Nichols, who is still out with a bad knee.

IOWA.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 5.—Iowa's eleven was practically intact at practice Tuesday and presented its best front since the Chicago game, a fortnight ago. Parsons, crack half back and quarterback, has returned to the game after being on the hospital list for two weeks and is almost as good as ever. This makes the Iowa back field the fastest and best the Hawkeyes have had in several seasons.

The second eleven and freshmen runners tried a few Indiana plays (only a limited number of which are known here) but were not as successful as when they attacked the regulars with Maroon plays last month.

INDIANA.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 5.—Practically a full squad reported for work on Jordan field, following the victory over Ohio State last Saturday. The coaches divided the men into two teams and began working them for the Iowa game at Iowa City next Saturday. "Big" Ed Davis, captain of the eleven, who has been on the hospital list since the Chicago game, exercised up and down the field and may get in the clash against the Hawkeyes.

Johnson and Scott, both fullbacks, who have been on the injured list, were in the lineup. It is thought both will be ready for hard work by the middle of the week.

RAIN POSTPONES GAME.

ABILENE, Tex., Nov. 5.—The Giants-White Sox game here Tuesday afternoon was postponed owing to rain, and the two teams left on their special train at 4 p. m. for El Paso, where it was announced Matthews and Leverenz will be the opposing pitchers Wednesday.

N. D. FOOTBALL STARS NOW COACHING—MATTHEWS

The speed of Capt. Rockne and Gushurst of this year's eleven, their marvelous ability, in tackling on the defensive, and in pulling down forward passes on the offensive is a forcible reminder of one of Notre Dame's greatest ends, Lee Matthews.

"Matty" is now at Kenyon college in Ohio. In 1911 he coached at St. Edwards college in Texas and the following year won but four games as against three lost, everybody at the Ohio school was well satisfied with the work of Matthews. Kenyon was defeated by teams from the better calibre, but when playing eleven of his own class was among the best in the Buckeye state. Her most notable achievement in 1912 was a 22 to 13 victory over Cincinnati university.

In 1908 Matthews came out of the wilds of Washington and immediately made good on Notre Dame's football, eleven. As an end he had few superiors in the west and it was his fierce tackling and all around defensive work that kept Michigan from crossing the gold and blue goal line that year. Allardice's three goals from the field saved Yost's men, for the Wolverines could not get the ball inside Notre Dame's 20-yard line.

Matthews was noted that year for his playing on the defense. He had an uncanny power of sifting through the opposing interference and throwing the runner for a loss. "Matty's" tackling and piling up of the interference featured Notre Dame's 5 to 9 victory over Marquette in 1908.

In 1909 Matthews was one of the main cogs in Notre Dame's wonderful championship machine. He earned the undying gratitude of all Notre Dame men that season by scoring the touchdown that defeated Pittsburg. The smoky city school was represented in 1909 by the greatest team in its history. Shortly after the game opened with the ball on Pitt's 35-yard mark, "Matty" pulled down a forward

DO YOU RECALL OLD GINGER LIL? HE'S GOING SOME

Popular Third Sacker of Old Greens is Michigan State League Favorite—He Tells Something on Harry Arndt.

Special Correspondence.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Nov. 5.—The name of "Ginger Lil" (Olive Oil) Sager will be handed down from generation to generation of followers of Central league and Michigan State league baseball. Mayhap when one of the greatest inflicting arms in the world begins to kink, Ginger Lil will give up olive oil baths and his him to sunnier clime where the sun will boil his blood and lubricate the joints of that time-tried super.

But from present indications Ginger is going to meet his fate in the Michigan State. That's one of the predictions in that old parody which followed "Casey Jones" in natural popularity. In the chorus Ginger Lil mounts to the bumpers with his bat sack in his hand and takes his farewell trip into the blue grass land. Substitute "wooly" for "blue grass" and you have Ginger Lil located. He's now hibernating—it's his second season here—in Ludington, America, as Helne Tiesman might elucidate.

We should shudder. And how that wind sweeps down the street unchecked except by the fancied protection of the breakwater piers far down Ludington's street. The very element that would make brittle the baseball arm you would think, but after the winter of 1912-13 Ginger's throwing extremity showed no signs of failing or stiffness. Queen Lil hustles freight in the winter. At least he's connected with the freight office of the Pere Marquette railroad.

The veteran is as great a favorite around the busy streets as in the Central. They refer to him as the grand old man in Michigan, despite his claim of but 30 squints at the buds of spring. The grey around his temples is extending into the pepper as ever, that crown and his forehead seems to be heading toward the same spot. But 42, as some assert, he has admitted to be his real age, or 30, Ginger capers as cheerfully and as full of the real thing in pepper as ever, that field he is a whirlwind and with the old stick he has at last eluded a nine years' batting slump.

Fast on Ground Balls.

Ginger's not very fast going down to first, but he circuits as many times as the best. When he goes to the ground ball you would think he was the fastest man in the world judging by the Gatling gun action of his thin legs in five or six steps. His natural inability to cover ground in record time is revealed, though, when he has to run more than 30 feet.

And his arm. There never was such an arm and never will be another, they say. Ginger cares no more where he fields a ball, it's going to the proper place in the quickest possible time. South Bend fans will remember Ginger once had a habit of flinging the ball far and high at critical stages, at least it seemed that way to the twice or thrice weekly bug. Ginger has reached that stage of sedate conservatism where he can no longer see any point in raising the hopes of the opposition or depressing the home gang by a wild heave occasionally. It might afford novelty to his play. Ginger figures, but at the same time it lengthens the game. Therefore, he throws accurately, always with the express purpose of getting the day's labor over as soon as possible.

He Stopped Finally.

Oh, he's human, is Ginger. One day he knocked down a one hop hard hit ball with a man on first base and chased it all the way into right field, permitting the runner to take third although he recovered in time to hold the hitter at first.

At the beginning of last season Sager announced his firm intention of starting south to his parents' home in Kentucky the night of Sept. 14—the league season ended on the 14th. He changed his mind during the summer and decided to take another chance on the icy Ludington lake breeze and took a new method of treatment in the spring. Ginger has been relying since he was in this section upon daily olive applications, but the coming season, he says he is going to keep a bag full of ground ready and take a plunge in it every day.

P. S. This is on the quiet. When someone inquired one day how old Harry Arndt, Mariner manager, was, Ginger replied, "Oh, he's the ancient mariner, himself. I peeked through knot holes to see him play when I was in knee pants." Taking into consideration the common judgment of Olive Oil's age, Harry is classed by those who received the statement directly or by hearsay with Pop Anson.

Not So Old.

In justice to Harry, we must add we have it on authentic authority that: If Ginger Lil Sager is a truthful man (he says he is only 30, remember) Harry Arndt isn't more than four years older than the local favorite.
